Yes Brent, that time will work for me.
And, no, I have not talked with APCD recently.

Greg –

I met yesterday with some of my Air Division managers, Amy Zimpfer and Matt Lakin regarding your inquiry. Hope you had some enjoyable time off. They have asked me to see if I could set up a call with you to discuss. Their calendars are jammed, but I was able to find a time slot for Wednesday, August 10th at 3:00pm that will work for both of them and myself. They did mention to me that the ruling mentioned in your message is a State court and not a Federal court. They also mentioned to me that they would be happy to discuss with you the work that our office is involved with so you have a better understanding of our monitoring efforts and work with the San Luis Obispo APCD. They asked me whether you had already reached out to the APCD as some of the questions you have regarding the fines, etc. are within their jurisdiction.

Please let me know if you would be available for a conference call on Wednesday, August 10th at 3:00pm, and if so, I will send out a calendar invite to confirm along with call-in number and access code. I look forward to hearing back from you.

Best,

Apparently the 2nd Dist. Court of Appeals ruled that the APCD could not require a permit but then Superior Court ruled that everything else in the Dust Rule stands including fines for violating air quality.

Trying to figure out whether this still meets the EPAs concurrence.

The recent news, which I'm trying to confirm, is that the Superior Court ruled that the APCD must pay $382k in court costs.

By the way, CalCoastNews is not a trustworthy news source, despite the fact that they seem to pop up first for news stories in Google regarding this.

Greg –

I am checking in with my Air Division and Enforcement Division colleagues to see who may be aware of the Pismo Dunes and APCD ruling. Will follow up with you once I know who may be familiar with this issue and could perhaps get on a call with me and you. Found some information from a Google search that I have shared with my colleagues, that I am copying/pasting here. If you have any written information on the APCD ruling to pass along, please let me know.

Found a link from April that addresses the Pismo Dunes issue:

Found the following information on the San Luis Obispo County AQMD website:

<http://www.slocleanair.org/library/press-releases>

6-20-16: Better Breather Alert - Blowing Dust June 20

The San Luis Obispo (SLO) County Air Pollution Control District (APCD) and County Public Health Department are advising the public of deteriorating air quality in the Oceano Dunes/Nipomo Mesa area due to blowing dust and sand on Tuesday, June 20, 2016. Blowing sand and dust is forecasted to occur from noon to 7 pm, with the dust forecasted to peak from 1 pm to 6 pm. Very sensitive individuals such as infants, as well as children and adults with existing respiratory or heart conditions, may experience adverse health effects during blowing dust periods.

County officials recommend that the public reschedule outdoor activities to occur when there is no visible dust. If blowing dust and sand is visible in the air, County officials recommend all adults and children avoid strenuous outdoor activity, remain indoors as much as possible, and set any heating/air conditioning/ventilation systems to recirculation. The public is advised to consult their doctor if they are experiencing health problems in an area with blowing dust and sand. If staying indoors does not provide relief, temporarily leaving the area and going to a location where the sand is not blowing and dust is not visible, is advised.

County officials will continue to closely monitor air pollution levels throughout our region, as forecasts can change. Current air quality conditions and air quality forecasts for San Luis Obispo County are available to the public via the APCD website slocleanair.org/air/AirForecasting_map3.php. The forecasted AQI is also available to the public via email. Sign up to receive the daily air quality forecast via email by visiting slocleanair.org/air/airforecasting.php. A recorded message describing San Luis Obispo County air quality conditions is available by calling (805) 781-4390.

Greg -

Thanks for your voicemail. I am checking in with my Water Division colleagues, Mike Montgomery and David Albright regarding your question as to a Listening Session vs. Public Hearing and who would be hosting and how would it work. I will pass along anything I find out. I am out of the office this afternoon, but have forwarded your voicemail to both of them and hope to hear something by the end of the day or by tomorrow morning. Thanks.
